To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this letter of recommendation for Victoria Sublette.

Vickie was in my graduating senior seminar this semester and was truly an extraordinary student. I hope this letter reflects how outstanding Vickie is and how much she contributed to my class.

Vickie excelled in all aspects of her academic work. Her paper and class presentation on stress in the workplace demonstrated her ability to apply theoretical concepts to real-life situations. The paper was thoroughly researched and very well written.

Although Vickie prefers to work independently, another student asked if she could work with her. Vickie agreed and their teamwork was exceptional. It was clear that Vickie was more skilled at papers and presentations and yet she worked so well with the other (shy) student, that both of them presented very well.

Besides being so articulate in writing and her oral presentation, Vickie was remarkably supportive of her colleagues in class. Vickie came prepared to discuss all of the topics and was very thoughtful and insightful when she spoke. She was very attentive as well as enthusiastic in her responses. She was sensitive to others' opinions and ideas and was very open to feedback. Additionally, because her presentation was so superior, I asked her if she would be willing to give an introductory presentation to the class on Microsoft PowerPoint. Vickie not only did this — and again, she was so professional and competent — she also met individually with other class members to help them develop their presentations.

I have been teaching for almost 30 years and can easily say Vickie was one of the most special students I have had the opportunity to teach. As you can see from her resume, she has had a wealth of experiences. From getting to know her a little outside of class, I also know that Vickie has been on her own since she was 16 years old. Her appreciation of learning, her openness, sincerity, responsibility, enthusiasm, great sense of humor and kindness make her a remarkable person and student.
